SENSATIONAL RAID ON MOONSHINE MAKERS OF LESLIE

Dry Agents Destroy 14,000 Gallons of Beer and Seven Stills; Arrest Six Men in One Biggest Raids For Years

FIRST TIME THIS SECTIO OF STATE EVER INVADED

Perhaps the biggest raid ever conducted by prohibition agents in Southeastern Kentucky was made this morning when federal officers and their deputies went into Leslie count, and found between 12,000 and 14,000 gallons of beer and seven copper stills and arrested six men taken at the stills

The raid was made at a place on Beech Fork in Leslie County, four miles from the Harlan county line and forty miles from Pineville It is the first time this section has ever been raided W. B Saylor, prohibition agen, conducted the expedition.

The beer between 12,000 and 14,000 gallons of it, was destroyed as were the seven copper stills of capacity of from 35 to 60 gallons. One still house was burned also and six arrests were made

A local man, formerly resident of this district, declares that this place has been the chief source of liquor for Lynch, Benham and White Star for several years, and that he has long understood that a great many men in this section have moonshine making as their only means of livelihood.

SALVATION ARMY WANTS CLOTHING TO GIVE POOR

Old clothes and shoes are wanted by the Salvatoion Army for distribution among the poor of the city. Garments for children are especially needed at this time. Those having any second hand garments to give are requested to bring them to the Salvation Army headquarters or to call old phone 347 so that a representative of the organization may call for them.

No clothing has been donated to the Army since Christmas, according to Commandant C Cuthbert, and many children and adults are suffering from lack of sufficient clothing. The most indigent cases will be relieved by the garments donated.

Commandant Cuthbert says that public mendicancy has been greatly decreased in Middlesboro. Beggars are rarely seen on the streets and when such are found an investigation is made of their circumstances by the Salvation Army.

WISE SPECIALTY SHOP SPRING FASHION SHOW IS WELL ATTENDED

Probably one hunder and fifty women attended the spring fashion show held at the Wise Specialty Shop yesterday afternoon and a number of others who came were turned away because the place was too crowded for them to get in. Miss Hallie Wise, proprietor of the shop, had charge of the program.

The shop was decorated in spring flowers to set off the lovely spring garments that were shown. A dais was placed in the back of the shop and the live models appeared on this, then walked down steps to the main floor. The models were Miss Lenore Herd, Mrs Claude Silvers and Miss Kathryn Burch. Music was furnished during the entire time by members of the Manring Theatre orchestra.

Hats, coats, capes, suits, dresses and novelties were shown, illustrating fashion's trend this season Bright colors were every where predominant in dresses and hats. Capes are again the fashionable wrap and even the coats have cape-like qualities. The Balkan blouse is the most popular cut for suits.

SWEEPING CHARGES AGAINST KU KLUX FILED IN SENATE

Papers Challenge Earle Mayfield of Texas' Right to Seat in Congress —Klan Is Heavily Scored

CHARGE "PROSTITUTION CHRISTIAN RELIGION," BRUTE FORCE

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Sweeping charges against the Ku Klux Klan and its officers were made today in papers filed with the Senate challenging the right of Earle Mayfield to take his seat in Congress as senator from Texas. The Klan is charged with concealing its real designs under a cloak of patriotic pretensions in order to hide plans to subject the government and constitution to the "Invisible Empire" and with conspiracy to evade, violate and defeat federal and state laws. They further charge on that the organization has attempted "prostitution of Christian religion" and had resorted to "brute force," intimidation and "immoral and lawless practices."

Mayfield's election was sought by the Klan, petition states, to "foster its purpose of securing political and commercial dominion." The Klan charges with documents contesting Mayfield's election were filed by Geo. E. Peddy, who opposed Mayfield for senator last November.

MAYO TRAIL OPENS UP SANDY VALLEY

Line From Ashland to Pikeville May Have Connecting Link to Pineville

By Associated Press

ASHLAND, Ky., Feb. 22.—Completion of the Mayo Trail from Ashland to Pikeville with the possibility of another link connecting Pineville will give a short route highway linking the entire south with the territory north of the Ohio river, according to members of the Good Roads Committee of the Northeast Kentucky Coal Association. Members of this committee representing the counties of the Big Sandy, appeared before the State Highway Commision at Frankfort in the interest of the new highway

Assurance from the State Highway Commission that work will be started in the near future gives promise of a hard surfaced roadway throughout the coal fields of the Big Sandy. The road from Ashland to Paintsville will be under construction within a few months, the committee was assured. The stretch of roadway from Prestonburg to the Johnson county line will be completed by Floyd county, which offered the Highway Commission $100,000 for immediate use on the project. The project from Paintsville to the Floyd county line and from Prestonburg to the Pike county line will lack completion.

A THOUGHT

Pilate saith unto him, What is truth. John 18:38.

The truth of truths is love.—Bailey.

IF WASHINGTON WERE HERE

If the noble character whose hundred and ninety-first birthday anniversary we celebrate today could return to earth for a brief space and see the progress of the country he founded, would he be pleased or angry? It is safe to say he would be surprised We may say with equal veracity that he would be gratified at the sight of our industrial and financial progress. But what about our politicians who can be bought for gold, our lawyers who win cases regardless of the law, the countless multitude to whom our constitution and our laws are mere scraps of paper?

Men in whom were reposed positions of trust did not do these things in his day. To him there were no compromises between truth and fallacy. Anything was either right or it was wrong, true or false.

There is little doubt that his ideals of the eighteenth century would be rudely shattered. By looking at this side of the picture, he would doubtless regret that he had led the brave colonial lads through eight years of suffering and misery for a country that could so soon forget and ignore the very principles upon which it was founded.

But there is a bright side to the picture and one that is even more evident than the other. If Washington were here he would also see the stately churches, the modern schools, the mammoth factories. The hum of industry, the tolling of the church bells falling on his ears, would help to drive out the discordant sound of chaos resulting from the present day turmoil.

His keen eye and his thinking mind could see beneath the turbulent surface a strain of real Americanism, something akin to that which carried the revolutionary heroes across the Deleware, that enabled them to endure suffering and death that Liberty might live.

CITIZEN TRAINING CAMPS

Calls are now going out for young men to enroll in the military camps that the government maintains at various centers in the work of building up the organized reserve forces. The course of instruction lasts four weeks during the summer months and young men elegible receive their transportation to and from the camp they are assigned to, are outfitted and for four weeks undergo military instruction and enjoy camp life diversions.

This is a part of the American military policy—the first time America has had a military program—of building up an organized reserve force, ready to be mobilized in organized units should emergency require. In this reserve force America really is organizing the backbone of its preparedness program and its military strength in time of need will lie therein. Neither the regular army nor the National Guard could avail alone in time of military crisis. But an army of citizen soldiers, trained in organized units, fitted through drill and instruction for the duties of the soldier, backing up the regulars and the guard, would insure America a military strength not likely to be trifled with.

The organized reserve has aptly been described as America's military insurance. The World War demonstrated that one million men might spring to arms if needed, but the act of their springing was so disorganized, so haphazard, that it required months of patient selection and drill before a very small percentage could be incorporated into fighting units.

But the organized reserve is an insurance in another sense, for there is no better way to counteract radicalism than through these military camps where in addition to military instruction, the youth of the land absorb patriotic understanding and responsibility. Army men declare the time is coming when the force of Americanism, as fostered in the citizen's training camps will be called upon to put down loose-mouthed "isms" which are menacing the land.

There is a military training camp in every section to which young men of the country are eligible. Full particulars may be had of any reserve officer, national guard officer, or by writing direct to district military headquarters. It is an ideal way for a young man to pass four pleasant and profitable weeks, and is a patriotic duty well worth performing.

Fellowship of Prayer

THURSDAY

Accepting the Call to Service

"And those are they such as hear the word . . . and accept it and bear fruit." Mark 4:20

Read Mark 4:1-20.

Christian men and women are filled with energy, but in many cases the energy turns no wheels."

MEDITATION: Thought precedes any successful undertaking, whether it is building a house or a life. Good impulses die if they do not develop in the soul of thoughtful attention. No truth is ours until we have heard it, accepted it and put it into practice.

HYMN:

Christian, rise, and act thy creed.
Let thy prayer be in thy deed;
Seek the right, perform the true.
Raise thy work and life a-new.

PRAYER: We give thee thanks O. Lord, for the work to which thou hast called us, and for our fellowship, in that work, with thee, with one another and with all those who are devoting time, thought, life, prayer and money. We offer ourselves anew for this service, and ask thy blessing upon all who who are ingaged in it and upon all for whose benefit it was undertaken. Amen.

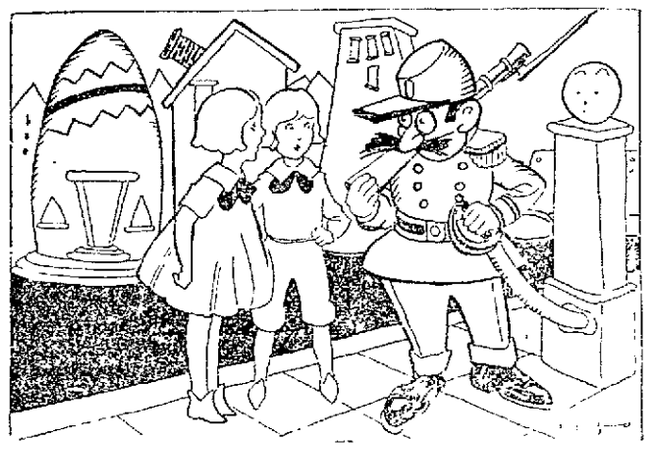
Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



The next person that Nancy and Nick met in Criss-Cross City in Mix-Up Land was a soldier.

"Hello!" said Nick.

"Hello!" said the soldier. "Where are you going?"

"We are going to see Jack Straw's palace, if you please. We'd like to see it."

"I don't please," growled the soldier. "It's a secret, so it is, and if you try to see it I'll have to shoot you."

"Then," sighed Nancy, "I suppose we'd better not try, had we?"

"Listen!" whispered the soldier. "Go ahead if you want to. If I shoot you it won't hurt. My bullets are only bread pills, and my sword is made of rubber. It can't cut you it would only rub you out."

"We don't wish to be rubbed out, either," said Nick. "We had a hard enough time getting here. Are you a private soldier or a corporal?"

"Neither," said the soldier. "I'm only a poor general, and I have to stand here all day like a crossing sweeper to see that the pigeons don't run over the children."

"That's funny!" declared Nancy. "Pigeons aren't big enough to hurt children, besides they wouldn't anyway."

"Oh, you don't know a thing!" declared the bread-pill general crossly. "Pigeons here in Mix-Up Land are wild and ferocious. It is the automobiles that are little and tame and gentle and eat out of the children's hands. Look out! There's a pigeon now. He nearly stepped on you."

"Say," said Nick. "If you know where Jack Straw lives why don't you tell us? We'd like to see him."

"All right, I'll tell you," said the general. "Only don't tell anybody. He lives in a house made of dominoes, and the door is the domino with the double five on it. There isn't any handle. All you do is to push."

"Oh, thank you," cried Nancy. "Thank you so much for telling. And where is the house? We can't go in until we find it."

"It moves around, so I forget," said the general. "But if I think of it I'll send you word."

WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE WORLD

By Charles P. Stewart

The State Department's quoted now as doubting if the Pan-American Congress in March will induce the Uruguayan president, Dr. Brum's plans for a League of American nations.

If North Americans had the slightest idea how South Americans feel, they never would have considered such a thing remotely possible.

The theory here seems to be that although Americans are North and South, yet they're all Americans and can agree, at any rate, on some sort of a joint attitude toward the rest of the world.

The fact is that South Americans are mostly unassimilated Europeans. They're a thousand miles nearere to Europe in sentiment, sympathy and comprehension than they are to the United States.

Not only are they Europeans but they're predominantly Spanish, and while the North American has pretty well forgotten his war with Spain, the Spaniard hasn't.

About the only feeling that the South America is a South American has toward the American of the north is that the latter's a strong, dangerous neighbor, and that the less the American of the south has to do with him, the safer he'll be.

It's Too Late Now

The United States had one chance, indeed, to win South American favor, but she botched the job.

During the war South America needed her. If she'd merely been too busy to heed this call it wouldn't have been so bad. The allies, however, had various things they wanted done that they didn't care to do themselves, because they knew the South Americans wouldn't like it, which would hurt their standing later on. So they invited the United States to attend to these matters for them, and she did. The thanks she received was to have the allies make capital out of it against her every chance they got.

North Americas' shortcomings after the conflict were mainly trade mistakes of ignorance, like forgetting, for instance that December's mid-summer and July mid-winter south of the Equator, and shipping winter goods in the spring and summer goods in the fall.

Commercial rivals made the most of these errors, too.

Then there's the United States persistence in trying to get Latin America into a patent and trade mark league with her, which, as a Venezuelan "Yellow Book" remarked, "would obligate us at great expense, to organize a bureau to record all patents and trade marks registered in any of the signatory countries," a thing Venezuela isn't enthusiastic ever, considering that the United States registers about as many a day as she does in a month.

These are just illustrations.

South Americans are half irritated, half contemptuous at North America's failure to understand such things.

Of course there are individuals pro-North Americans. President Brum of Uruguay's one—for interested reasons. He isn.t representative.

No Solution Yet

Of the Ruhr puzzle, no solution's been found.

France hasn't made a particle of progress in the direction of collecting any war damages, and the Ruhr enterprise is very expensive, naturally she's getting worse and worse off financially every day she continues the occupation.

On the other hand, Germany's worse off, too, though i tdidn't seem at the time her territory was invaded, as if she had much margin left to get worse in.

The best international authorities say it can't be long before both sides will have to ask for neutral mediation.

They generally agree also that when this happens, it will be the signal for a complete re-making of the Versailles treaty, as an impossible document.

It's noteworthy that practically the only constructive suggestions any world statesman has made have come from Joseph Caillaux, an ex-premier of France, whose views were so far in advance of his countrymen's during the war that he barely missed facing a firing squad.

Caillaux's for a "United States of Europe" and for land disarmament.

Debt Collecting Plans

The war debt funding arrangement which the Washington administration made with England has been approved by the United States Senate.

The senators, however, made a few changes, so the agreement will have to go back to the representatives for another indorsement. There's no chance that there will be any objection.

The administration meant the agreement to be a model it could follow in making similiar settlements with other countries, without asking Congress about them again. But the Senate insists Congress shall keep on having the last word, as in the present case. That was the principal change made.

There's no occasion to worry about it at present, for no other country's threatening to pay the United States.

As for her own claims, England's showing signs of impatience. It's understood she will soon ask the allies who are under obligations to her when they can begin doing something about it.

Another report is that the American government and financiers will try to help the English pound back to parity with the United States dollar in international exchange markets, the idea being that this will send part of the world's gold, most of which has been gravitating in this country's direction, toward London.

It will be a good thing if the plan works. While flattering to have the bulk of the gold in existence, it's been overdone, with bad results to American trade.

In placing blame for the present distress of Europe, it is impossible to overlook the responsibility of the bird who invented interest.

THERE SEEMS TO BE A SLUMP IN THE HERO BUSINESS

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

"Can you see anything?" Latham asked, following the direction of Kate's gaze.

Kate was looking toward the back of the shop. From the room, off the dim passageway, which she recognized as Sing Loy's gorgeous bedroom, rays of light slanted. It seemed to her that Sing Loy's wailing came from there.

Dared she venture back? She asked herself.

"Will you wait here while I go back? I know him a little—perhaps he wouldn't object to my coming," she whispered and then left Latham standing alone in the shadowy front room, while she made her way cautiously toward the back of the shop.

A low, flat pile of freshly washed and dried clothes lay, ghost-like on a long table. She halted, frightened for the minute.

But like a magnet the sound from the back attracted her. She moved on. As she entered the passageway back of the ironing room she stopped again. The place was narrow. It's intense blackness was broken only by the thin rays of light which slanted from the room head.

Kate stood waiting, fearing to go on.

She sensed a presence back of her. Suddenly it seemed to Kate that her throat had become paralyzed. She wanted to turn to see who was near her. She wanted to speak. But she was powerless.

A hand touched her arm. She trembled. The darkness seemed to intensify.

"Kate," the word was barely audible.

Kate relaxed. Latham had followed her. It was his hand which touched her arm. She was glad he was there. She realized that she had been more afraid of the blackness than she had wanted to acknowledge.

"I didn't want you to come back here alone," Latham whispered, "but I'll keep out of sight as you reach the door."

Her hand closed over his for a second. Then Kate started silently on toward the light ahead.

The door, she found when she reached it, was all but closed. Through the opening, only a length of scarlet satin shimmered. The light within was dim. The voice of Sing Loy, somewhere on the other side of the partition, had died to a low, crooning sound.

Too spellbound to utter a sound, Kate touched the door. It gave under the pressure of her hand. As it moved slowly back the brilliant satin-covered bed was visible.

Across the bed, wrapped in a radiant kimona, one white arm thrown above her head, was Alice.

BLUEPRINTS

By Berton Braley

These are the charts of dreams that shall come true,
These are the plans from which there shall arise
Towers that lift their heads against the skies,
Ships for wide seas, and planes to ride the blue.
Floods shall obey, tunnels be driven through
Eternal rock, the wilderness that lies
Unpeopled, shall awake to high empires,
And all the world shall be made over new.

Under the magic guidance of these charts,
Marking in lines and figures what the brain

To unimagined riches, lovelier arts,
To hopes we seek and goals we shall attain,
These blueprint epics of the days to be!

BLOSSOMS

Know you the Kentish borders,
In the busy town I sit—
And dream—and call to mind
Mile after mile of Orchard
In the full tide of spring,
Sweet with a thousand perfumes,
And white with blossoming.

From Har street into Appledore—
And on—again—and on—
Where like a fairy-isle, snow-girt,
Lies shy Kenardington;
Up the hill to Wittersham—
And turn again, and then—
By the toll-gate at Small Hythe
That leads to Tenterden.

Through aisles of trembling blossoms
Neath the blue arch of sky—
By winding leaves of Pearsmarsh—
And back again to Rye;
Out on the Romney marshes—
For company the sheep,
Might I wander in my dreams
I could not choose but sleep.

SPANISH OMELET
By Bertha E. Shapleigh

Take two teaspoons each of good oil and chopped onion, a clove or bean of garlic, chopped, two cups of canned or four fresh tomatoes, peeled and cut into small pieces, one teaspoon each of salt and paprika, a quarter pound of fresh mushrooms, eight olives, stoned and cut into strips, five eggs, five tablespoons water or milk and salt and pepper.

Cook the onion and garlic in the oil for five minutes, being careful not to brown. Add tomatoes, sugar, salt and paprika, and cook slowly for half an hour, or until thick. Wash, peel, and cut into pieces the mushrooms and cook in a little butter for five minutes. Add the tomatoes, and at the same time add the olives.

When the mixture is ready make the omelet.

Beat the eggs very slightly with a fork, arr water or milk, salt and pepper. Heat the frying pan or omelet pan, add oil, and pour into this the eggs. Move the pan frequently as the eggs set, and, with a knife, raise it from the bottom of the pan, allowing the uncooked part of the egg to touch the pan. In this way the egg does not become hard, but remains creamy. When only a very little egg remain in a liquid state loosen around the edges and fold over two or three times. Turn into a hot platter and pour the tomato around it. Garnish the top of the omelet with a few sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Kiwanians Observe George Washington's Birthday Today

George Washington's birthday was observed at the Kiwanis Club meeting today in splendid style. The tables were decorated in small red American flags to give a patriotic air and the chief address of the day, on "George Washington," was given by T. R Hill

"I hope we may never grow so old or so indifferent," began Mr. Hill, "that we can not stop a minute to honor George Washington, the father of our country. Although things are happening every day in our country to signify a falling away from his precepts, there are still Americans and George Washington is still honored."

Mr. Hill went on to cite unamerican hapenings which seem to go unavenged—the Herrin massacre, the Ku Klux Klan atrocities, the sobotage at Corbin, and he urged loyal citizens to rise up and assert Americanism, and to push socialism, Ku Klux, I. W. W. and other such things back across the sea where they belong.

'It is high time that our country, especially this section of the country which boasts of 100 per cent pure Americanism, should pledge itself against these attacks at our nation's foundations, and that it should institute a program to rid the nation of these foes," declared Mr. Hill.

"We must get back to the principles of George Washington," continued the speaker, "principles founded on unselfishness and the noblest ideals of liberty and the rights of man." He went on to show why Washington's principles, being founded on such ideals, had lived, while those of other fathers of their countries, as Caesar, Hannibal, Napoleon and Kaiser Wilhelm, had not because of their fundamentally selfish principles.

"No fame nor tribute that we can pay," declared Mr. Hill in closing, "could spell George Washington. His life challenges the best in men, that they should go back to his ideals and rededicate their lives as true Americans after the pattern of this first true American."

The Kiwanis Club enjoyed a short musical concert by a blind musician, Bryan, who will give a recital at the school auditorium Tuesday night. The concert, which was greatly enjoyed, consisted of a song, "I Hear You Calling Me," two Harry Lauder impersonation numbers, and a representation of a player piano.

C. G. Smyth was chairman of the day. R. L. Kincaid drew the attendance prize and the silent boost, little cans of paint and paint brushes, were given by S. M. Reams. A directors' meeting was announced for tonight. At the close of the meeting announcement was made, at the instigation of C. O. Brown, that several members of the cast of "Eve," would be Kiwanis guests next week. A good attendance is expected at this time.

The following letters, from Representative Robsion, were read:

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 20, 1923.

Mr. T. R. Hill,
Middlesboro, Ky.
My Dear Mr. Hill:

I received your letter and thank you for your words of appreciation. I was mighty glad to learn you and others would bring up ybur end of the line. I shall do everything in my power to realize the wishes of you and your neighbors.

I doubt if the Committee will make any report on the Slemp Bill and there is no chance for Slemp to pass his bill. We may not get a report on our bill at this session, because the Committee requires a report from the Secretary of the Interior before acting, and the Secretary of the Interior will not make a report until someone, from his Department, visits the proposed park.

I saw Senator Ernst and he will do all he can to promote our park project. I hope to get over to Middlesboro before long and have the pleasure of seeing you. Remember me to Mr. Liebig.

With best wishes, I remain,
Your friend,
J. M. ROBSION.

P.S.—The eastern papers stated in large headlines that Slemp was going good until Robsion and his crowd exploded the Cumberland Gap bombshell. Slemp says we killed his bill.

Washington, D. C.
Feb. 16, 1923.

TO THE KIWANIS CLUB,
MIDDLESBORO, KY.
Gentlemen:

First, I want to thank your Club for having sent to Washington Messrs. A. P. Liebig and T. R. Hill. Their work here in connection with the proposed Lincoln National Park, was very effective indeed. I am sure that no two men could have been more effective.

A rule of the Public Lands Committee of the House, requires a report from th Department of the Intreior before action can be taken by the Committee. I have been talking with practically every member of the Committee since the hearing yesterday, and all of them are very much impressed with the Cumberland Gap proposition. The Chairman of the Committee has called on the Department of Interior for a report. Action

The Advocate of Faith

Everybody knows the story of the cherry tree and everyone appreciates the deep-lying philosophy that is the moral of the tale. On this day when we all honor the "Father of His Country" we call attention to the large part that the principle of plain, straight forward honesty, has played in our history. It is the foundation of our political development, it is the cardinal princple of American business.

The International Harvester Co. of America holds to the faith of Washington. It believes in honest values, in truth, in advertising and in the high standards of modern motor trucks.

The International Harvester Co. build the best, the most serviceable, dependable and satisfying motor truck of our time and for less money, because of the well known fact that they own the truck in its raw state of existence cannot be taken until this report is received.

If we had, had, the proposition so that the bill could have been introduced two weeks ago, there would be no doubt but what we could get favorable action from the Committee now, and we may get favorable action before Congress adjourns. I might say that nearly every member of this Committee has been re-elected and if we do not have them to get action at this session, I have no doubt but what we shall get favorable action at the next session of Congress.

It will be my pleasure to visit that section and help in every way I can to get the matter in definite shape. If the people of that section put up the land, I feel sure we can get the park. We must not quit until there is a National Park at Cumberland Gap.

I wish to thank each member of your Club for their effective help and through your Club thank the open spirit of citizens of that section.

With every good wish, I remain,
Sincerely yours,

GOOD SOAP FOR TWO CENTS A POUND

Make It At Home By This Easy Process—Takes Less Than 30 Minutes.

Nowadays, more and more women are doing as their mothers did and are making their own soap. If you have never tried it, you will be surprised to see how easy it is to make good soap, soft soap, hard soap or floating soap, just by using kitchen scraps and waste grease together with a can of Merry War Lye, the safe and sure soapmaker.

In the old days when soap was made by the boiling process it took nearly all day to make a kettle of soap. Now it is hardly any work at all—requires no boiling—takes less than 30 minutes. Saves you money and gives you all the pure, clean soap you need for kitchen, laundry and all household purposes.

You will find simple directions for soap-making on the label of every can of Merry War Lye.

Merry War Powdered Lye comes in a convenient can with revolving sifting top that cannot come off, cannot get lost, recloses tightly and preserves contents. It is economical to buy and easy to use.
